The spread of the COVID-19 disease has had a very rapid and deeply disruptive effect on the global economy. It is highly uncertain what the full effect of the spread of the disease will be in the medium-term and in the long-term, especially given that the immediate effects are still rippling through markets. However, everyone can reasonably expect that those effects will be significant and long-lasting.

The applicability of the Financial Advisory and Intermediary Services Act to cryptocurrency assets

Recently, we have been approached by several people who wanted to know how and whether South African financial services legislation applies to persons who wish to provide advice to third parties who are interesting in investing in cryptocurrencies. Specifically, they want to know whether or not they need to be licensed as "financial services providers" in terms of the Financial Advisory and Intermediary Services Act, 2002 (FAIS).

Do foreign financial services providers need to register as external companies?

The Financial Services Board (FSB) sent a letter dated 6 September 2017 to its registered foreign financial services providers (FSPs) advising them that it had come to the attention of the FSB that certain foreign FSPs conducting financial services related business in South Africa (also referred to as the Republic below in quoted legislation) are not registered as external companies in the country. According to the FSB, this registration is required in terms of s23 of the Companies Act, No 71 of 2008 (Companies Act).
